

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE WITH DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES IN MARYLAND ARE WAITING FOR VITAL SERVICES.

YOU CAN HELP

Two-year-old TARA has multiple disabilities. Instead of having a bedroom filled with toys and stuffed animals, Tara's is filled with medical supplies. Tara requires care every hour of the day, so her father is unable to work. His bills keep mounting.

TOM has Down syndrome.

He watches television all day; he has no friends and little social interaction. He wants to work but cannot find a job.

JOYCE, who has cerebral palsy, uses a wheelchair and requires assistance with personal care. Her elderly grandmother worries that when she dies, Joyce will have no place to live and no one to provide care.

There are thousands more children, youth and adults in Maryland who have developmental disabilities. They are waiting for help, too.
